Motorola provides health insurance for its employees on a self-financed, self-administration basis. the distribution of staff in various types of floors is as follows: 16% in 23 hmo; 6% in managed indemnity; 6% opt out and do not have Motorola-provided insurance; and 72% are in a customized program designed to improve clinical quality of service and patient satisfaction, called the health advantage plan. the health advantage plan does not use a gatekeeper, a captaintion or a deep discount and a little resembles appo. employees are subject to annual periods of registration, with about 2% of switching plans per year. as a self-administration plan, motorola installed both internal and external auditing processes, including the required eryss appeal process. Motorola is unusual in being without national union (at world level except where political processes require otherwise.) Motorola focuses on proactive improvements in system quality and services rather than on individual remonstrations, which typically come from quality and/or service issues. has a strong emphasis on system-wide assessment of its health insurance plans. in the assessment of its hmo, the measures it considers are: clinical quality - 35;% customer satisfaction - 30% financial - 20;% and access - 15.% as a result of this systematic evaluation, motorola has decreased the number of hmo that offers employees from 35 to 23. the share of employees in hmos has decreased from 35% to 16.% with a greater intake of the health advantage plan. Motorola also offers employees a report card on the hmo, mainly based on systematic evaluation, but also hedis measures. Moreover, it carries out annual surveys on customer satisfaction with the results as follows: hmos - improvement of customer satisfaction from 84 to 91.%; andof health advantage - customer satisfaction is about 93-94.% motorola has never lost a case brought in court through the external review process. works internal auditing processes using standard eryss processHMO standard reviews as required by state regulation. In conclusion, more and more, companies like Motorola have developed policies and procedures designed to systematically improve clinical care and customer satisfaction to attract and maintain employees.
